As Zero Hedge would put it, “presented without comment.” Except, of course, this article from earlier today (Sunday afternoon)...

Yes, 77 “Sunday Night Sentiment” attacks in the past 78 weeks – whilst no other market materially moved. Actually, tonight took a full two hours before the typical Cartel raid; with oil sitting at the same -1% level as it opened at two hours ago, as opposed to most weeks, when the attacks start within 15 minutes of the ultra-thin Sunday night open (if that long).

Think these monsters aren’t terrified? Amazing how much more intense the attacks became in the weeks leading up to the Swiss vote; let alone, now that the END GAME of global economic collapse is upon us.

Why am I writing this – on Sunday night, as Diana is cooking dinner? To let you know just how desperate TPTB have become to prevent the “Achilles Heel of the Financial World” – i.e., silver, from doing NOW what it must inevitably do, sooner or later...

And remember, gold is up for the year – by 1% in the U.S., and on average, 5% in the rest of the world (as you’ll see in my next article). And as for silver, demand has NEVER been higher – or the outlook for supply EVER so weak.
